

enabled the creation of a multitude of new technologies, including the telegraph, radio, television, and, eventually, satellite and cable technologies and the internet. These new technologies were transformative because they allowed information to move much more quickly than the speed at which communicate their own views. Others had more limited communications possibilities.

---

---

The rich and powerful were also able to control other advanced technologies such as radio, television, cable television, and satellites. While

---

---

